3:23 am MsCareerGirl: RT @CornOnTheJob <--- Hates Paper #JobHuntChat Yeah- seems kind of outdated and slow.

3:23 am abbylocke: that works 2 RT @frankzupan: Q2: Why not a phone or VM follow-up? more sincere and direct. #JobHuntChat #jobhuntchat

3:23 am MOARdrew: I've seen the same. RT @jesslaw: Q2: Ive been told by some PR pros that a thank you note is the deciding factor. #jobhuntchat

3:23 am jessicamalnik: @sadoty Looks professional-- plus it's easy to read. Don't have to worry about smudges and bad handwriting. #jobhuntchat

3:23 am bitty_boop: RT @YaniqueShaw: I heard "Send an hand written thank-you note after the interview, it shows you know how to use a pen." #jobhuntchat

3:23 am JennSchooley: @jesslaw Me too. That's what I've constantly been told and read, so it's what I do. Plus, I think it's respectful. #jobhuntchat

3:23 am KellyLux: Great tactic for co. u really want. RT @TheInterviewPro: have u ever sent a thank u note 2 the sender of a rejection letter? #jobhuntchat

3:23 am caseylooney: @gonzalsa I feel your pain, most applicants address me as Mr! #jobhuntchat

3:23 am Jfavreau: Q2 I usally send both. I think the personal touch goes further. Even if you aren't hired they still will know you & remember. #jobhuntchat

3:23 am frankzupan: RT @CornOnTheJob: Q2: The best candidate gets the job. Not the most well-written thank you note. #JobHuntChat

3:24 am fianxu: @MsCareerGirl Along the lines of Q2: How can you show enthusiasm (in a thank you note or otherwise) w/o being unprofessional? #JobHuntChat

3:24 am emrosario: Q2 I would send handwritten note if possible- stand out, its more personal & every1 else is already sending a thank-you e-mail #jobhuntchat

3:24 am tlcolson: even with a small co. , u need to follow their process. having to scan or manually enter into system doesn't make me ur friend. #jobhuntchat
