@trainingfactor Actually been thinking about that a lot lately. No real answer, but our gen was very unprepared (econ, psych, etc) #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to trainingfactor

trainingfactor

@blogging4jobs I think that there does need to be more adaptation in training and mentoring in the work place #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to blogging4jobs

BLKMGK01

@NahumG I'd say start by answering the question "Why do you personally want to engage Gen Yers?" then gauge response. #GenYChat about 1 hour ago via Seismic in reply to nahumg

christammiller

@trainingfactor Heh. I lived that myself. Took a bit to figure things out! ;) #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to trainingfactor

@christammiller As one ages/matures, the love 4 change is replaced by the love for more of the same... #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to christammiller

blogging4jobs

so how do we work with others that don't get it? #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

trainingfactor

@NahumG I really wonder what the recession of 2007 to present had done to GenY folks #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to nahumg

tyippie

@NahumG Truth. Gen Y generally like to push horizontal hierarchies and it seems to work in some companies #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to nahumg

@GenyChat Long list of difference - e.g., multitasking, collaborating, text messages, social media, dislike rigid hierarchies,... #GenYChat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to GenYChat

WriterChanelle

@christammiller LOL...glad you could make it #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to christammiller

trainingfactor

@davecarhart that is a fair statement.. which I am delicately trying to communicate #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to davecarhart

typpie

@GenyChat I disapprove with that. Arn't GenY the generation that is driving changes in technology today? #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to GenYChat

@christammiller I'd say the difference is the speed of learning. We know how to leverage tech better to learn more. #GenYChat about 1 hour ago via Seesmic in reply to christammiller

trainingfactor

@christammiller when the college dream does not come to fruition.. then it leaves folks in a what do I do now mode #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to christammiller

@nahumg I think the biggest similarity between the gens is eagerness to learn new things. #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat

davecarhart

@trainingfactor I do think that our generation will get some wakeup calls when the world doesn't suddenly bend to our will though #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to trainingfactor

lizziepauker

@trainingfactor -it's not that geny needs special treatment. things are changing across the board not just in the workplace #genychat about 1 hour ago via web

trainingfactor

@GenYChat my honesty may get me in trouble :) #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to GenYChat

Missed #imcchat but i'm so excited to finally join #genychat!! #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat

No absolute answer to that. Some say that GenY aren't as technologically savvy. There are GenY'ers out there who disprove that #GenYChat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

nahumg

@TerrenceWing Yes, right now-bt we need 2provide environments flexible eough 2accommodate GenNow & GenY-Later, it will be GenY+??? #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to TerrenceWing

#GenYChat @GenyChat Totally agree with you about the learning but got to do it carefully to avoid the same mistakes. about 1 hour ago via Seesmic

trainingfactor

@christammiller that is my big question. but it stems beyond education, but also perception of career path #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to christammiller

davecarhart

@trainingfactor @nahumG Except that isn't the case--all gens have engaged in a mix of accommodation & change w/ existing work #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to trainingfactor

TerrenceWing

@trainingfactor @nahumG You are right. It doesn't have to be special treatment but it does have to be customize treatment #genychatabout 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to trainingfactor

GenY needs to learn from generations prior how to manage themselves in preparation for taking over down the line @nahumg #genychatabout 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

davecarhart

@NahumG Best work I've seen so far is "The Trophy Kids Grow Up" -- very insightful on just that issue #genychatabout 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to nahumg

christammiller

@trainingfactor Interactive in what way, & how do you bring together all generations in a family? #genychatabout 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to trainingfactor

trainingfactor

@NahumG in reverse..everyone else has needed to adapt to what exists.. why special treatment is my question?#genychatabout 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to nahumg

davecarhart

@trainingfactor I see one of the biggest impacts (as far as informal training) being centered around feedback--much more often #genYchatabout 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

I'm interested in reconciling gaps in knowledge of Generation Y habits.

@writerChanelle Too bad. I am here on behalf of @LiquidLearn Maybe we can chat next time #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat

@GenYChat Yes THANK GOODNESS. LOL ;) #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to GenYChat

trainingfactor

If I can throw a topic out there.. how has employee training changed with a new generation in the front lines of the work force? #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat

Hey! Welcome! The kids are asleep I take it. @christammiller #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

@GenYChat Do you need to bridge the gaps or somehow to develop a world more suitable for Gen Y #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to GenYChat

The umbrella is upside down because the categories (raindrops) are falling into the umbrella @NahumG #GenYChat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

trainingfactor

@GenYChat In my industry there are numerous generations in the workplace #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetChat in reply to GenYChat

Could you two start by discussing your interest in generational topics @trainingfactor @NahumG #genychat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck

@GenYChat So why is the umbrella upside down? #GenYChat about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck in reply to GenYChat

.@nahumg #GenYChat is an umbrella chat discussing generational issues pertaining to Boomers, GenX, and GenY/Millennials about 1 hour ago via TweetDeck
